

Faith@Home

CHERRY STREET BAPTIST CHURCH

RELATIONSHIP WITH OTHER SINGLES {CONNECTION}

Best Use

A dinner with other singlemen and women

Nutritional Value

Singlemen & women will gather to encourage, challenge, and support one another

Advance Preparation

Get a group of your single friends together for a home cooked meal on a recurring basis. Whether it's once a week, every other week, or once a month, take turns planning and cooking a meal to share together. If people don't want to cook, eat out or picnic and bring your own meal. Writing down the getting to know you questions on paper, and preparing the Bingo game. Bake off explanation before hand to the group.

During The Meal

Spend time intentionally asking questions and enjoying each other's company developed by @angiewoodscoaching

Pick an activity to do together:

High's and low's

Everyone goes around and shares 1 high (or a great thing going on in their life) and then everyone takes a turn sharing 1 low (or the worst thing going on in their life). For fun you can vote on the best high and the worst low...give out a silly prize or award.

Ask getting to know you questions

Look these up on the internet and have them written down on paper, either pick a question and everyone answers or each person picks a different question and answers.

Would you Rather

You can each take a turn and ask a would you rather question. The more realistic the better.

Getting to know you Bingo

Create a bingo worksheet. The sheet will have bingo squares on it, but instead of numbers put a different fact inside each square (owns a dog, been to Europe, knows how to play the guitar, etc.) Make enough copies of the sheet for everyone to have one. Each person has a paper and walks around asking other people if they can fulfill one square on their page. The person puts their initials on the box if they can fulfill it. The first person to get signatures to make a bingo wins.

Two truths and a lie

Each person tells 3 things about themselves, two truthful and one a lie. The others try to guess who one is the lie and give a reason why they think it is so.

Bake off

Pick a category that you will bake in. Each person brings a dish that they enter into the bake off. Everyone goes around tastes, and judges them. Most votes wins.

Being together as singles gives you a great opportunity for connection, something a lot of single people lack. The thing that tends to connect each other is when we feel seen, known and understood. Consciously seeing each other in your group is a great way to create that for single people. Sometimes we feel most understood when we share where we are and others share that they are there too. Create some time and space for you to intentionally ask these questions. You may decide this is best done in the same gender so guys group up and girls group up. Sometimes this is great for the whole group, you can decide.

What is the hardest part about being single right now for you?

How can we encourage/support you during this?

What is the best part about being single right now?

How can we help you enjoy these parts?

What are you looking for in a community during this season of singleness?

